Process of coding Trump markov chain!

Two steps: data + models

DATA

From
https://github.com/MarkHershey/CompleteTrumpTweetsArchive/tree/master. But it's quite corrupted and I have to do some processings.

Data processing procedure is accomplished in `data_prettify.py`

Data can be found in directory (folder) `data`

MODEL

Fit a markov chain, accomplished in `markovify.py`. This give us the markov-ed tweets of Donald Trump, which is stored in the pickle file markov_chain.pkl

Tweets is generated by running `start_tweet.py`

You can find these files at the zip file in my submission on blackboard, but of course I can run it on my computer in a meeting if you'd like
Note: the IMG_5129.mov file is proof that I actually made the model (the markov chain being calculated)

`[mathilda@mathilda-timstaller ~/d/Class/com/two]$ ls`
`data  data_prettify.py  IMG_5129.mov  markov_chain.pkl  markovify.py  start_tweet.py`

Preliminary observation

Model tweaking

[mathilda@mathilda-timstaller ~/d/Class/com/two]$ python start_tweet.py

Observation 3:
Deleting "realdonaldtrump" makes "foxnews" the most favorite word trump uses whenever he types "@".We can't keep deleting words forever!!!!

New idea: we don't consider probabilities of words that come after "@" at all. Whenever we encounter "@", next word will be random. We also reduce occurrences of "@" by half - same for "great"

Which tweet is from @realdonaldtrump ?

Note that nobody serious about Natural Language Processing uses Markov Chain to do anything - it's too rudimentary! Markov chain does not "understand" context, nor does it consider grammars! It's just an extremely simple statistical model operating purely on word-by-word probability - a memoryless stochastic process.
